Synopsis Of The Senior Scene

Our Senior Year . . . only a scene in the Play of Life . . . But, what a year it was! A year of firsts and lasts . . . our last Homecoming, our turn to be feted by the Juniors at Junior-Senior, our privilege to leave assemblies first, our classmates starring in athletics and leading the school, and our chance to make a contribution to the school, whether large or small . . . A year to be remembered for our hard-won State Championship in football . . . A time of living and working with other champions . . . the "always-on-the-job" Yellow Jacket staff, the deserving Superlatives, those who strove diligently to give us a yearbook, the reigning King and Queen at Homecoming, the NHS members, and the SA officers to whom we looked for guidance.

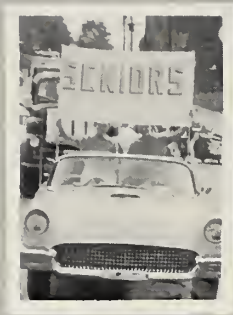

A mixture of cut-ups, serious students, happy "hes and shes," "snowed" ones, likable and easygoing classmates . . . This was our senior class . . . Each an individual, but each a part of Boyden . . .

The underclassmen, teachers, and parents . . . They, too, played a vital role . . .

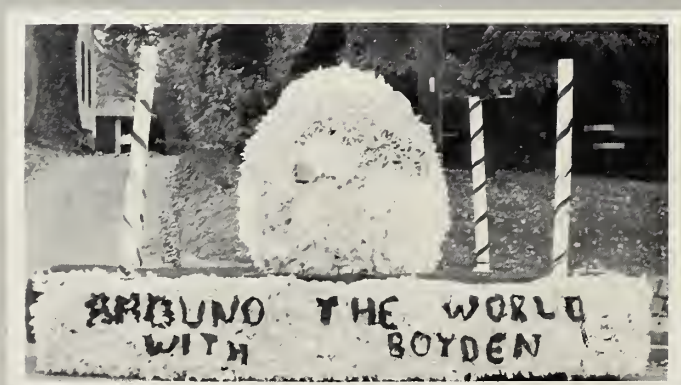

All this and much more will never be forgotten. For what we have found at Boyden can never be taken from us!

SENIORS DISMISSED!

QUILL AND SCROLL

Truth is the keynote of all endeavor. The journalist must take Truth as his watchword. He must fearlessly tell the truth—uncolored by his opinion—and let the world judge its value. From the candle of Truth, then, we will light our tapers of journalistic endeavor: initiative, opportunity, leadership, loyalty, enlightenment, and friendship.

The curtain has been drawn on your high school days;
Now you must go forward your separate ways.
The acts are over; the story's been told,
But the memories you'll cherish, for they'll never grow old.

As the lights grow dim at the end of these acts
Your days here are over and you can't turn back.
Strive onward and upward; set your goals high,
Do your best without a tear or a sigh.

Act well your part in all that you do.
The success of life's drama depends upon you.
The Director will lead you and help you do right,
But the living is yours, so follow His Light!
